Spatial Cultures
Contents

Journal of Space Syntax
The Bartlett School of Graduate Studies
ISSN: 2044-7507

Published by:
University College London (UCL)
http://joss.bartlett.ucl.ac.uk

VOLUME 7, ISSUE 1
Online Publication Date:
28 December 2016

Editor:
Dr Daniel Koch, KTH

Associate Editors:
Dr Lars Marcus, CTH
Dr Sophia Psarra, UCL

Editorial Manager:
Dr Ann Legeby, KTH

Copy-Editor:
Ella Sivyer, UCL

Media and Technology Manager:
Tasos Varoudis, UCL

Editorial

Spatial Cultures
by Daniel Koch

Volume Theme: Spatial Cultures

The Spatial Culture of Factories
by John Peponis
[originally in Human Relations 38(4)]

Reclaiming the virtual community for spatial cultures: Functional generality and cultural specificity at the interface of building and street
by Garyfalia Palaiologou, Sam Griffiths and Laura Vaughan

In search of building types: On visitor centres, thresholds and the territorialisation of entrances
by Mattias Kärnhölm

From exhibits to spatial culture: An exploration of performing arts collections in museums
by Kali Tzortzi and Bill Hillier

To each, their beach: Unveiling nexus between architecture and society in urban beaches
by Lucy Donegan and Edja Trigueiro
Contents

Autumn/Winter 2016

Non-thematic section
- p. 107 - 136
The Architecture of Mixed Uses
by Laura Narvaez and Alan Penn

Book reviews
- p. 137 - 140
Reviewed by Daniel Koch

The journal of space syntax is a peer-reviewed, open access academic journal focused on research investigating relations between society and space. While grounded in the research field known as space syntax, from which the journal draws its name, the journal considers its field of inquiry in a broad sense and invites articles of a wide range of theories, approaches and methods addressing its broader scope. The journal accepts both quantitative and qualitative research, empirical, theoretical, methodological and other kinds of articles, where the inclusion is based on the quality of the contribution and its relevance for the journal's scope.